@Raf Onak feel free to take a pass 3/15/2022, 8:34 PM UTC

RO

ok, here are some proposals:

You're about to leave the app and be taken to an external website. You will no longer be transacting with Apple.

You're about to leave the app. You'll be taken to an external website and will no longer be transacting with Apple.

You're about to be taken to an external website and will no longer be transacting with Apple.

3/15/2022, 8:57 PM UTC

i think if we want to include all three points (leaving the app, going to an external website, not transacting with apple), it's best to do that in 2 sentences

3/15/2022, 8:57 PM UTC

TL

Terry Liu

How about

You're about to be taken to an external website. You will no longer be transacting with Apple.

3/15/2022, 9:04 PM UTC

RO

Raf Onak

yep, that's another variation 3/15/2022, 9:05 PM UTC

not sure how important "leaving the app" is in phil's eyes 3/15/2022, 9:05 PM UTC

JE

Josh Elman

This app is about to take you to an external website, and you will not be and would "You're about to go to an external website..." work? 3/15/2022, 9:06 PM UTC

JE

Josh Elman

Another variant:

This app is about to take you to an external website, and you will not be transacting with Apple.

 3/15/2022, 9:06 PM UTC

Another variant:

This app is about to take you to an external website, and you will no longer be transacting with Apple.

RO

Raf Onak

to me, "about to go..." is more informal compared to "be taken to..." 3/15/2022, 9:08 PM UTC

josh, for some reason, saying "this app is about to take you..." feels safe to me?
like, don't worry, you're still within the app and it's just guiding you somewhere else right now and i think we should stick with the "no longer transacting" language as jef f was very vocal about that

3/15/2022, 9:09 PM UTC

JE

Josh Elman

yeah -- good point. "About to go to" is a little more like into the great wide open 3/15/2022, 9:09 PM UTC

@Raf Onak Phil did like the "this app is..." language from the "this app does not use private and secure App Store payments"

3/15/2022, 9:23 PM UTC

Do we have any variants that start there? 3/15/2022, 9:23 PM UTC

RO

Raf Onak

oh shoot, you're right, i think i mixed up the pages we want to align 3/15/2022, 9:29 PM UTC so back to your original proposal of "this app is about to..." 3/15/2022, 9:29 PM UTC

i wonder if "send" is better than "take" because it doesn't sound like the app will be holding your hand

3/15/2022, 9:29 PM UTC

This app is about to send you to an external website. You will no longer be transacting with Apple.

This app is about to send you to an external website. You will leave the app and will no longer be transacting with Apple.

3/15/2022, 9:30 PM UTC

JE

Josh Elman

I like "send". 3/15/2022, 9:30 PM UTC

RO

Raf Onak

This app is about to send you to an external website, and you'll no longer be transacting with Apple.

BM

to shorten can we remove "and" after the comma 3/15/2022, 9:31 PM UTC

JE

Josh Elman

"send you out to"? 3/15/2022, 9:31 PM UTC

TL

Terry Liu

"This app is sending you to"? 3/15/2022, 9:31 PM UTC

RO

Raf Onak

This app is about to send you out to an external website. You will no longer be transacting with Apple.

3/15/2022, 9:32 PM UTC

i have no preference for "out", works either way 3/15/2022, 9:32 PM UTC

terry, can't say "app is sending you to" because as phil mentioned, you still have a choice

3/15/2022, 9:32 PM UTC

"sending you to" sounds like it's happening 3/15/2022, 9:32 PM UTC

JE

Josh Elman

Question / thought on whether -- "out" makes it more clear you are leaving the app without saying "leave the app"

3/15/2022, 9:33 PM UTC

TL

Terry Liu

it does have continue or cancel below though (shrug) 3/15/2022, 9:33 PM UTC

RO

Raf Onak

for sure, i'm just reacting to it because phil specifically called out "when you leave this app" today

3/15/2022, 9:33 PM UTC

TL

Terry Liu

FWIW i like "This app is about to send you to an external website, and you'll no longer be transacting with Apple." I like the comma instead of two sentences to connect these things better

3/15/2022, 9:36 PM UTC

RO

Raf Onak

josh, if we want to "scare" users a bit, i like the addition of "out" because it raises questions and hesitancy haha. out? out where? omg what do i do?

3/15/2022, 9:36 PM UTC

so i think our favorites are:

This app is about to send you out to an external website. You will no longer be transacting with Apple.

This app is about to send you out to an external website, and you will no longer be transacting with Apple.

3/15/2022, 9:37 PM UTC

dropped the "you'll" contraction to be more formal 3/15/2022, 9:37 PM UTC

JE

Josh Elman

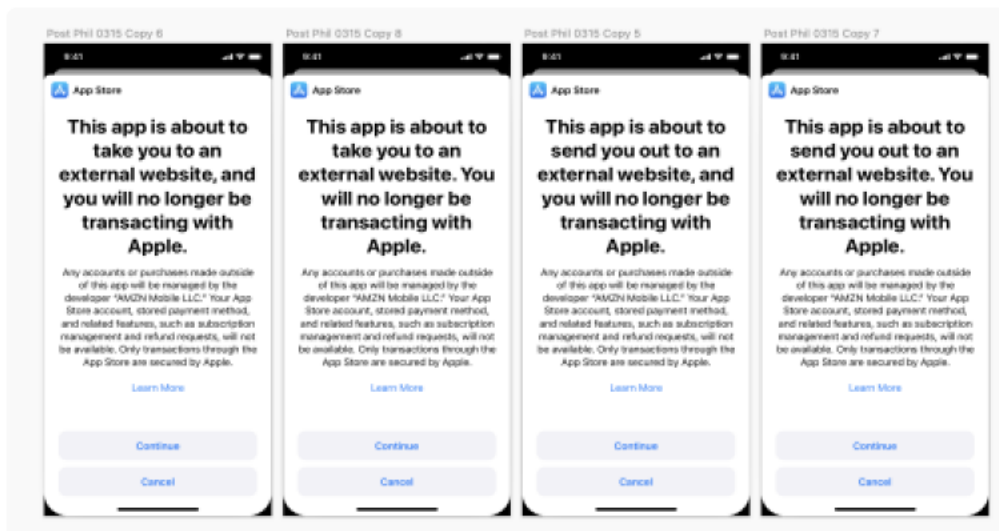

I'm good with these -- and I defer to you both on sentences vs comma. I think "send you out" has replaced "leave the app" but we might get some question about whether we need "leave"

3/15/2022, 9:40 PM UTC

TL

Terry Liu

Do we want to keep the "take" options vs. "send out"? 3/15/2022, 9:41 PM UTC

i think we should remove the "take" options 3/15/2022, 9:42 PM UTC

:+11: 1

and maybe we include one with "you're about to leave"? 3/15/2022, 9:42 PM UTC

You're about the leave the app and be taken to an external website. You will no longer be transacting with Apple.

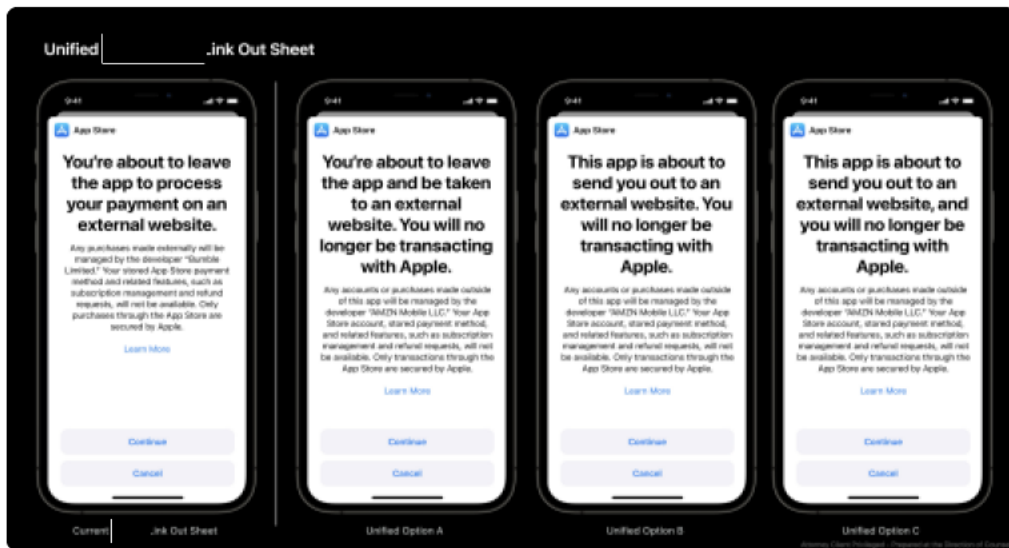

3/15/2022, 9:43 PM UTC

TL

Terry Liu

Ok seems like we have 3 options now. We can reduce it to two if we want to decide comma or two sentences on B and C.

these look good, let's get monika's thoughts 3/15/2022, 9:58 PM UTC

:+11: 1

BM Brandon Mihai
Can we just pick between B or C? Phil didn't want us to go with something like A, he was pretty adamant. 3/15/2022, 10:44 PM UTC

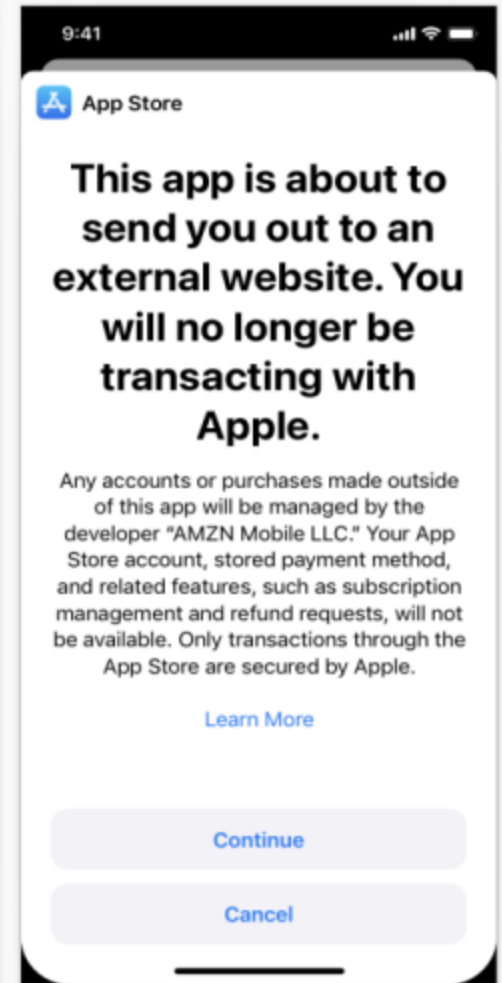

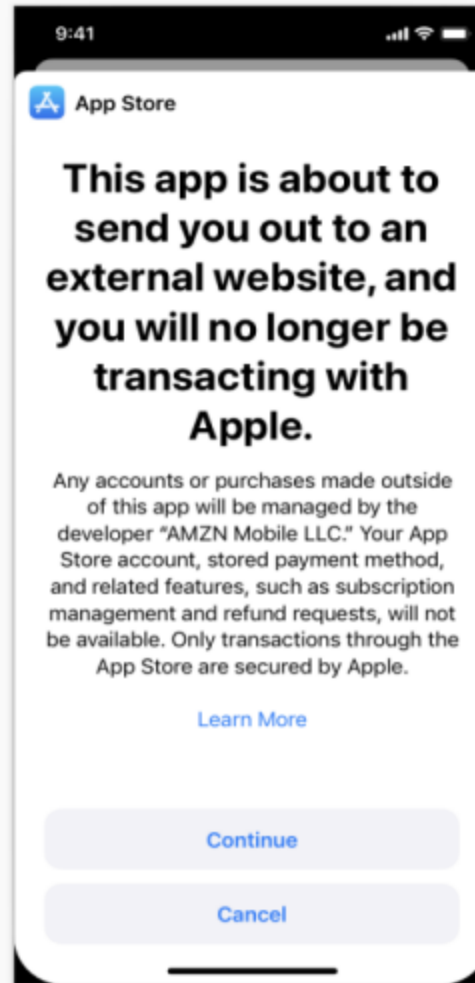

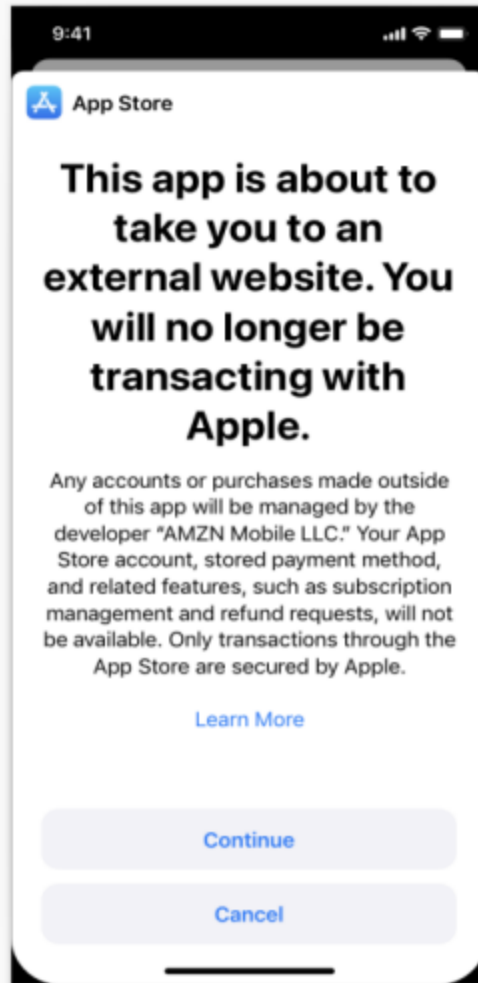

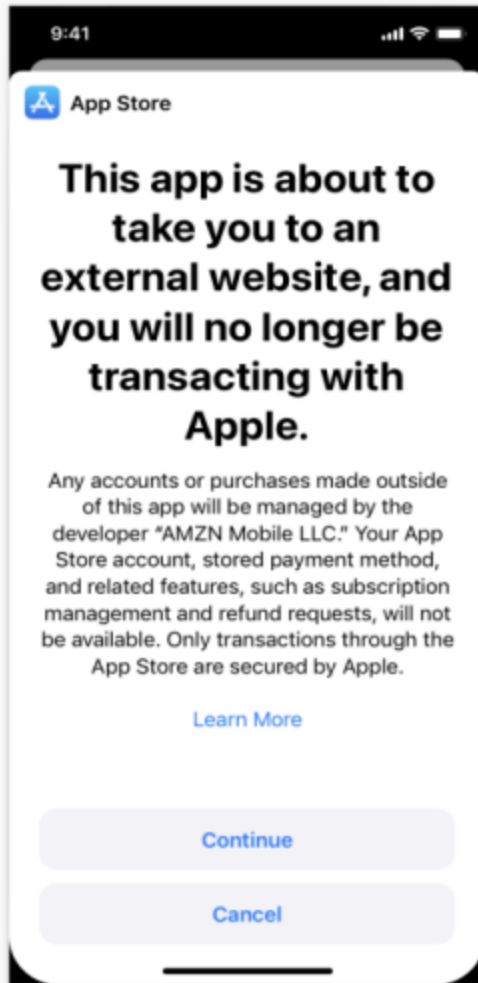

And then I think we should just pick between the comma or additional sentence 3/15/2022, 10:44 PM UTC

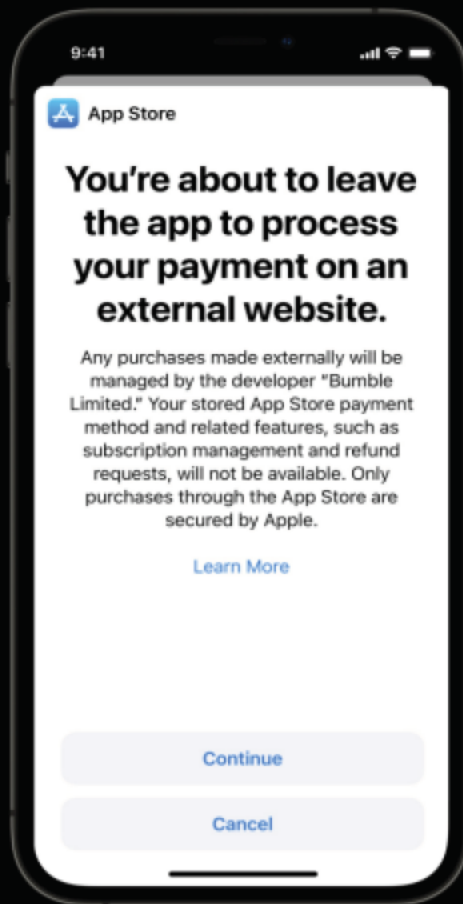

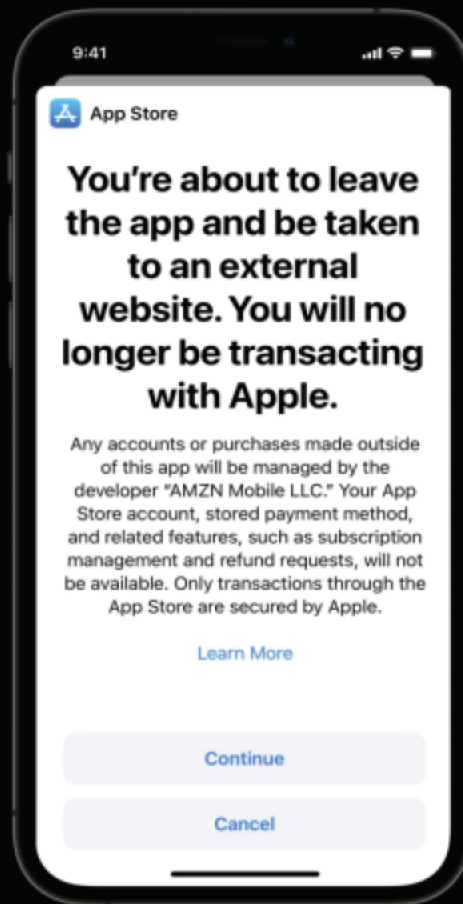

RO Raf Onak
sure, my vote would be B as i think the period makes it more authoritative 3/15/2022, 10:47 PM UTC

JE Josh Elman
i'm with you 3/15/2022, 10:48 PM UTC

Let's just send B to Monika over email Terry, that sound OK? 3/15/2022, 10:49 PM UTC
